Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

The remedy is intended specially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. It has become famous for its cures of these diseases, over a large part of the civilized world. The most flattering testimonials have been received, giving accounts of its good works; of the aggravating and persistent coughs it has cured; of severe colds that have yielded promptly to its soothing effects, of the dangerous attacks of croup it has cured, often saving the life of the child. The extensive use of it for whooping cough has shown that it robs that disease of all dangerous consequences. It is specially prized by mothers for children as it never fails to effect a speedy cure, and because they have found that there is not the least danger in giving it, even to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. Sold by A. C. Ireland.

A DEVISOR.

When her husband, Major Elwes, died out in India, Clara Elwes' best friends, knowing that her circumstances were straitened, besought her to stay with them until "she had had time to look round," which phrase, it must be admitted, was translated by some of these ladies into the securing of a substitute for the departed major in the shape of a second and more lovable husband.

The looking round process was, howover, unattended by any great success, not on account of any lack of applicants for the position lately occupied by the major, but because of Mrs. Elwes. At this juncture in her affairs the very timely death of a relative relieved the young widow of any any late with regard to the future from a relative with regard to the future from a anxiety with regard to the future, from a nonetary point of view, and also obliged her to leave India for home at a moment's notice. Among the many offerings which she bore away in remembrance of those friends she was leaving behind, was the address of a really honest, faithful, truthful servant, who had been in Charlie Dayenant's family, if not for centuries, at all events decades

It was the only gift of Davenant's that she had accepted, although he pressed upon her his heart and a considerable fortune. When Mrs. Elwes arrived in London, she interviewed the prodigy of domestic virtues, and, having secured her services, utilized her first as maid and then when she took the flat in which we now, on a dark January afternoon in this year 1898 of grace, find her, installed her as housemaid and domestic tyrant. The door opened and Susan in tones of onscious pride announced "Master Charles. ' "Captain Davenant," exclaimed Mrs.

Elwes rising, "this is"-"Most unexpected, of course," said the visitor. "You see, when I had sufficiently recovered to travel, the surgeon was naturally more anxious to have my room than my company, and as an Afridi and the fates brought my military career to a premature close, I saw no particular inducement in India to remain there as an onlooker, and so here I am. How well you are looking!"

are looking!" "We were dreadfully sorry—Susan and I—to hear of your wound and the loss of your arm. You will tell me all about it, won't you?"

"Well, no-the war correspondents remost highly on their good natured appreciation of me, and I would rather not spoil the impression they may have created in the minds of my friends. You should have been at our production of 'The Geisha,' the "At first they reported you as killed, and

"Good old soul, Susan, how have you found her?"

"You rounded on me once before, Mrs. Elwes, on that score, but I can assure you that I am now the most methodical of in-dividuals. I have planned out an existence that precludes impetuosity—besides, the disadvantage under which I now labor places an effectual bar to it."

"But it is in your nature to be impetu-ous. It was that that made you"—

"But besides pleasure I am here business, Mrs. Elwes."
"Indeed! What is the nature of it?"

"Well, I hope you won't be very angry, but I want to beg Susan back. I think of a local magistrate, and ending my days as a country squire, and, of course, I shall want Susan as housekeeper. With a little shooting and hunting, some fishing and shooting and hunting, some fishing and cricket—I suppose a fraction of a man can umpire, at all events—I hope to pass the remainder of my days in quiet contentment when I get accustomed to it."

"Must you really take Susan? I don't know how I shall get on without her. I have no right to keep her from you, however."

"I must have somebody I can trust as housekeeper, and Susan"—
"Yes, I know, but when you marry, as I suppose you will, let me warn you that your wife won't want an old family servant such as Susan to patronize her. Then perhaps you will let her return to me."
"I am afraid there is but little chance of Susan returning to you, Mrs. Elwes—at least, not for the reason you suggest. I may have had a certain amount of cheek in the past, but—well, I hardly think I shall ever have the impertinence to offer the remnant of my former self for any lady's acceptance in the future."

"Captain Davenant?"

"Mrs. Elwes?"

"Does 4 go into 18?"

If mothers would cast aside foolish prud-ery, and impart to their daughters the knowledge that they, themselves, have ac-quired by years of suffering, they would be forced to spend fewer hours of anxious at-tendance at the bedsides of sick daughters. A woman who suffers from treetendance at the bedsides of sick daughters.

A woman who suffers from weakness, disease, or derangement of the distinctly feminine organs is an incomplete woman. She is unfitted for woman's highest and best duty—motherhood. She cannot be a happy wife or the mistress of a happy home. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only proprietary medicine ever devised by an expert skilled specialist in woman's diseases for the one purpose of curing these troubles in the privacy of the home. It makes a woman strong and healthy in a womanly way, and can be relied upon to relieve motherhood of all peril and almost all pain. It insures healthy, robust children. It transforms weak, sickly, nervous invalids into healthy, happy wives and mothers. wives and mothers.
